

CIS 163 Fall 2026 – Midterm 1 Study Guide

General Computation

- Be able to compute various samples of code given to you
- Be able to explain what code is doing in plain English
- Be able to trace values in given code
- Be able to create and implement functions to solve various problems

UML Class Design

- Be able to read and interpret a UML Class Design
- Be able to implement code that is depicted in a diagram (build the framework)
- Determine various relationships amongst classes
 - four types of UML relationships

General Class Construction

- Be able to create classes effectively
- Be able to utilize properties effectively
- Be able to utilize inheritance when necessary

Testing and Exception Handling

- General practices of testing including unit testing
- Be able to trace references of objects
- Use exception handling appropriately